It often works in families, with a story of Tics that occur in about the half of the patients. Dash Mihok in 1988 with her two biggest sisters, both with Tourette syndrome. Courtesy Dash Mihok The exact heritability of the Tourette syndrome is poorly understood. "Although in many disorders the precise gene is known, this is not the case here," says Harvey Singer, MD, Faan, Professor of Neurology at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore. "Despite numerous studies in multigenerational families, a single important gene has not been identified. Rather, current tests suggest that Tourette is caused by changes in a variety of genes, and environmental factors are probably also." During his life, Mihok experienced the complete range of typical symptoms, including flashing, dampen, testing and backed, as such as actions that may appear targeted, such as jumping, sniffing objects, or touch them. He had vocal tics like grunge, barking, clearing his throat, say words or phrases, and sometimes repeat the words of others. At the age of 12, he had a brief bout in Coprolalia, outbursts of inappropriate or offensive words that people often associate with syndrome. (Only 10.8 percent of those with the relationship of Tourette experimenting Coprolalia, according to a 2015 study in clinical pediatrics.) "You were born with a problem attracts attention when it's the last thing you want," says Mihok. "What hurts most is that you are doing things that can take away from someone else's experience, like watching a movie. Sometimes it's a nauseating feeling." This lifeHe doesn't care, but like many people with the condition, Mihok found that his symptoms improved in his late adolescence and in the 1920s. And as the success of Mihok under the spotlights - both as an actor and a hip-hop musician "illustrates, people with Tourette cannot only manage their trouble, but also channel it in productive ways." When I started neurologist, I could indicate very few public figures that had a tourette ", says Donald Gilbert, MD, Faan, professor at the University of the Department of Pediatrics and Director of the University of Cincinnati and Director of the University of the Department of Pediatrics and Director of the University of the Department of Pediatrics and Director of the University of Cincinnati and Director of Cincinnati and D are more, and Dash Mihok is an example of someone who did it to the augliness learning the coping strategies, how to channel mental energy And physics in arts and sports. People should not feel hopeless for Tourette's syndrome, even if they have a bad case. "Many people with syndrome also have other neurobevoral problems, such as obsessive compulsive disorder (OCD) and attention deficit disorder and hyperactivity (ADHD)." I don't think I had ADHD, but I have a lot of examples of being OCD ", He says Mihok. A tica during his adolescence led to turn off a light switch while jumping into the air. "Everything had to be crunchy and snappy or I should do it again," says Mihok. "I would spend an hour and a half to take that jump. Right. "A more challenging tic involved lying in bed and pushes her body completely in the air without using hands or arms and land without bouncing." The first to go to bed was a whole process that kept me for hours, "says Mihok. The antidepressant and antipsychotic drugs were a mixed blessing, and Mihok does not take them currently. "They helped me get me to school but they made me earn weight, feel like a zombie, or both," says Mihok. "I heard that St. They have threatening my health, so I stopped taking anything around 14 years old. We did it enough cold in Turkey, but I was fine. "(A new American Academy of Neurology guideline for Tics Treatment in people with the notes of torettes that abruptly interrupt antipsychotic drugs can cause abstinence symptoms like movements of the Involuntary muscles.) At school, some of Mihok's classmates made things for him. "The power of the suggestion is crazy ¢ â,¬" and so that the children would ruin with me, "he says. "They said" Don't do it "or" don't touch it "like a trigger to make me trouble. Those Nervi would begin to shoot, and I would maniacally do it." But he remembers other people who helped him. Once, when he and a friend returned home after playing sports, "I had to touch my head with four fingers," says Mihok. "I said," I'm so sorry, "and ... I'll never forget this ... he said," Okay, George is fine. " 'George?' 'Yes, â €
