The reasons that were having the case were as viable and made a lot of sense to be honest. And the scenes were very emotional and surprisingly written. Fighting against the depression of the war and finding consolation at each other, something Ron and Ginny could not give them. They hated to do it and felt need so guilty of time, but it's how they were addicted to each other, helping them to mitigate the pain they were both feeling. They loved their partners and sex was just sex at the beginning of the case, but as the story begins a year for him and then A break from doing so, he starts again and sex becomes more emotional (for Harry more). They blame they worsen as they slowly realize that they can now love each other, just as they love their partners, but They want to harm them, Hermione is in more than Harry's negation but both pretend that love is not there and is just sex, it is a very interesting dynamic. The premise of the story was so good, but it was never finished. Now I'm craving something like that. Help would be much appreciated haha. 23 upvotes starts during POA chapter 9.
