Wondering why you are the only family of your family with your grandmother's nose? The way the traces are passed from one generation to the next generations and sometimes jump - was explained for the first time by Gregor Mendel. Experimenting with the creation of peas, Mendel developed three principles of heritage that described the transmission of genetic traits, before someone knew that genes existed. Mendel's perception has greatly expanded the understanding of genetic heritage and led to the development of new experimental methods. Figure 1 traces are passed from one generation to the next.
