up signals nearby. These are simple to install, connecting the antenna to a receiver and assembling the receiver near a window. A directional antenna points in a directional antenna with a 50-mile signal range. Outside AntennaOutdoor antennas are often used in remote locations to pick up signals with a longer range. They are usually mounted on a roof to reduce the likelihood of signal obstructions due to tree and building blocks. Since the facility involves getting on the roof, this type of antenna can be a little harder to install. An omnidirectional antenna picks up signals in different directions, rather than one like the directional antenna. Look for a 50-mile lane Areas with cell towers located farther away.
